The podcast centers on the "Magic 11" behavioral hacks that can help leaders transform into effective CEOs, no matter where they start on the organizational chart today. Through monthly episodes, Rempe and Reiss will talk with other industry-leading CEOs, breaking down what it takes to command a room, a career, and maybe even a company.

The fourth "Brain of Command" episode features Asheesh Advani, CEO of Junior Achievement, exploring hack #4 of the Magic 11 hacks: Play the Part.

"It's, in effect, a continuous improvement mindset; it's not like you start the hack and it ends, and you played the part and you're done," said Nate Rempe. "Essentially, as you're learning to play the part and you get the promotion or the goal or the job that you wanted, it starts over again."

"For young aspiring leaders, who are so obsessed with promotions and title changes, if they actually start to get obsessed with changing the way they're perceived and their role in the organization by playing the part early, those promotions and salary increases will come in due course," adds Asheesh Advani. "But when the motivation is about the impact and not the salary increase and the promotion, it becomes clear to everyone that they're trying to help the organization, not just navigating themselves into a better job."
